Bird Hospital

Hurtling down uncaught by updraft he receives the page
Saying cast off the woven coat of twigs and all the ice-
Sheathed vestments and scrub in

The doctor is the beast he was warned about who will try
To make him whole and dizzy from his fall he can’t protest
When his song turns monstrous

Nested in the anger he never wanted to be woven into this Bird made of bull and swan thundering on so no wonder
The sutures fail in the traffic of wings

Now in the unraveling operation lonesome
Haunted by malpractice and terrifying winds
Abjuring the night’s belated suit he solo wonton sings
