NEPANTLA:

A JOURNAL DEDICATED TO QUEER POETS OF COLOR

EDITOR IN CHIEF
CHRISTOPHER SOTO

EDITORIAL SUPPORT
WILLIAM JOHNSON

GRAPHIC SUPPORT
EDEN
WELCOME TO NEPANTLA

“Bridges span liminal (threshold) spaces between worlds, spaces I call nepantla, a Nahuatl word meaning tierra entre medio. Transformations occur in this in-between space, an unstable, unpredictable, precarious, always-in-transition space lacking clear boundaries. Nepantla es tierra desconocida, and living in this liminal zone means being in a constant state of displacement—an uncomfortable, even alarming feeling. Most of us dwell in nepantla so much of the time it’s become a sort of ‘home.’ Though this state links us to other ideas, people, and worlds, we feel threatened by these new connections and the change they engender.” – Gloria Anzaldua

WHAT ARE WE DOING HERE

Nepantla: A Journal Dedicated to Queer Poets of Color is an intentional community space. Our mission is to nurture, celebrate, and preserve diversity within the queer poetry community. Through this journal, we are attempting to center the lives and experiences of QPOC in contemporary America. Thus, we view the journal (and our reading series) as part of a whole artistic project and not individual fragments of work. We believe that (here) the high lyric must encounter colloquial narrative. Here, we must provide space to celebrate both our similarities and our differences. We are one community with an array of experiences; we write in different formats, in different tones, of different circumstances. Nepantla is not the sort of journal that can project a singular voice (not if we want to reflect the various realities of our community). Nepantla is a journal of multiplicity, of continual reinvention.

ACCOUNTABILITY CULTURE

Nepantla is NOT an apolitical literary journal. We stand strongly against racism, sexism, homophobia, transphobia, ableism, classism, xenophobia, etc. We do NOT believe in the notion of “craft” as an excuse to justify oppressive language. If (for some reason) you, the reader, feel discriminated against by the language used in our poems then please let us know. Keep us accountable. We have done our best to provide a safe space for the QPOC community. We hope you enjoy the fierceness!
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page 6</th>
<th>Joy KMT</th>
<th>to whom it may concern:</th> </tr> </thead> <tbody>
<tr>
<td>Page 7</td>
<td>Heidi Andrea Restrepo Rhodes</td> <td>The Terror of Clean</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 9</td>
<td>Xandria Phillips</td>
<td>reasons for smoking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 10</td>
<td>Crysbel Tejada</td>
<td>Ominous Light</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 11</td>
<td>Eduardo Martinez</td>
<td>I NEVER WANTED TO SPEAK</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 12</td>
<td>Darrel Alejandro Holnes</td>
<td>Prometí Nunca Hacer Drag</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 13</td>
<td>Roberto F. Santiago</td>
<td>Florals</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 14</td>
<td>Justin Phillip Reed</td>
<td>You Construct Intricate Rituals</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 15</td>
<td>JP Howard</td>
<td>Diva Doll</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 16</td>
<td>t’ai freedom ford</td> <td>the beautiful people</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 17</td>
<td>Danez Smith</td>
<td>On Grace</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 19</td>
<td>Kevin Simmonds</td>
<td>I expected to be sad in New Orleans</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 20</td>
<td>Dwayne Martine</td>
<td>Aporia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 21</td>
<td>Paul Tran</td>
<td>THIS TIME, THERE WAS NO</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 22</td>
<td>Joey De Jesus</td>
<td>Eastchester Bay [ending with an offering]</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 23</td>
<td>Pamela Sneed</td>
<td>Survivor 2014</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 25</td>
<td>Myriam Gurba</td>
<td>Constellated</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 26</td>
<td>Mariah L. Richardson</td>
<td>Butter Cream</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 29</td>
<td>Muriel Leung</td>
<td>Cry Wolf</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 30</td>
<td>Naima Woods</td>
<td>Necropsy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page 31</td>
<td>Kazim Ali</td>
<td>Bird Hospital</td>
</tr> </tbody>
</table>
Cam Awkward-Rich - Another Middle-Class Black Kid Tries To Name It Yani Robinson - Lou Sullivan’s Birthday Rajarshi Das - My Father’s Boyfriend Rage Hezekiah - MY FATHER, SWIMMING Roberto Montes - (no subject) – Chen Chen - Spell to Find Family
Lara Weibgen - I THOUGHT YOU SHOULD KNOW Derrick Austin - Major Arcana: Judgment Rosebud Ben-Oni - She Calls Once That Is A Lie Metta Sáma - {insert terror} Amber Atiya - if my slumlord allowed pets Conclusion
to whom it may concern:

i left my fishnet thigh high on your carpet, cherry stems littered on the bed. cobras in my chest

i'm messy

borrowed the sun to warm my feet
left a trail of forest in your kitchen. used your toothbrush
to do my baby hair,

molted a skin
on your sofa

i've never been more unapologetic in my life
The Terror of Clean

That space between
a limpieza and sweeping your kitchen with a dirty broom, clogged with hair and dustmites is very, very small, or so they would have you believe.

List of items in a cleaning kit:

1. broom
2. soap
3. brillo
4. machete
5. Kalashnikov Modernized Automatic Rifle (AKM) or IMI Galil
6. shovel

It is Colombia, it is the 1990s, it is now.

The scrape of nation-building rendering pillage heroic by a placid discourse of bourgeois mediocrity:
the exceptional or eccentric is dangerous, did you not hear? Did you not learn it from the inception of your breathing?

Aporophobia: fear of and contempt towards people who live in poverty.

And these are the disposables, the unwanted, the extraneous bodies, unprofitable, irrelevant to the march of silver and gold, the laborious privileges of citizenship, these are the ones who will catch the intention of lavish purges and be forced to swallow ammo too big for the throat.

Kill list for Mano Negra, the elusive yet pervasive hand of death, another piece of the putrid machinery that governs, that declares from the pit of unchurched holy taking, all the sins in their deadliness:

1. Foundlings, those with no nest, the homeless. Poverty is a sin. Sloth is a sin.
2. Nightwalkers selling their tongues like wares. Sex outside marriage is a sin.
3. False eyelashes and skirts on a cock-strut, Transgender, Transvestite, Transgressing bodies in a militarized culture. Deviation from masculinity is a sin.
4. Faggots and lesbianas. Homosexuality is a sin.
5. Human Rights Activists. Speaking out is a sin. Anti-imperialism is a sin.
6. Skin the color of earth and sunless hours. Refusing assimilation is a sin.
7. Mothers and daughters. Mourning is a sin. Remembering is a sin.
Police with their muddy heels in stirrups on badged horses talk their talk of cleaner streets, boasting of revelatory enterprise, bastion cities of order, security sacrosanct, so the suits can take trains without trouble and the young women of El Poblado, Comuna 14 can walk their unblemished cheeks and poodles down the sidewalks without risking

the tainted guilt of beggarly hands or the unfamiliar succulence of arousal, we are the vermin here.

We are the edged blades of fallen yearning, struck as with lightning and thunder for all the labyrinthine meanderings of our days away from the death of a thrust docility, and we pay for our refusal of purity, we pay for the distress of their daughters’ lips reaching for ours at sunset in the parks littered with deviants, our deviations carrying their discomfort, we pay for not being able to pay, we pay for having been boys who wore their mothers’ heels when she was away working her third job in one twirl of the sun, we pay for letting our nucleus grieve, for clipping our roses for hawking in moonlit markets, for fighting the deepest fight we can muster in the face of oblivion and contempt, for

that space between
a limpieza and sweeping your kitchen with a dirty broom, clogged with hair and dustmites is very, very small, or so they would have you believe.

Watch out, they will sweep you into the gutter and bury you with all the refuse, tattered clothing, scrap metal, broken radios of a convoluted wartime sensibility in the afterglow of an immaculate sterility, leaving your teeth to shine in the rain reasons for smoking

i.
to preoccupy the mouth in the presence of men

ii.
a burning tip is a weapon

iii.
to still the anxiety in my chest

iv.
a pallet
for my lips to stain

v. a way to be discreet in kissing my fingers

vi.
an excuse to leave

vii.
my own bones burning

watch their smoke pour from my mouth
Ominous Light

Walking down hill dirt path
a little shack by the road rusty metal roof.
Mami drags us there my brothers and I.
“will she do brujeria?” but mami refuses to call it that “los van a cura.”
She will heal them.
We watch
as she rubs medicine into her weathered hands.
They are like aloe vera, skin hard and thorny.
Mourning lines between the creases of her palm and fingers.
Calluses tracing the tales of lost and fallen souls, of handguns hidden underneath her dress, surviving cross fires.
And when you look deeper inside,
there are centuries of healing power.
The oil lantern illuminating the single room home fingers spread,
she places them on my brothers bare chest.
All eyes closed
We bow our heads together, Orando.
I NEVER WANTED TO SPEAK of the house facing Cowboy Park where my childhood pets are buried.

Eight small skulls scattered, each a burned-out bulb keeping the fig tree company, guarding the needles I’d eventually unearth. My neighbor, the infected queen, taught me how to shoot down pigeons.

Think of them as compliments, he’d say.
By the time I was old enough to know what he meant, it was too late for him. Still, he slept inside me for many seasons, cocking his shotgun at a flinching sky.

Disguised in pill and sneer, he waited for warmth to enter the body.
Prometí Nunca Hacer Drag

Te gusté tan recto como un hombre enamorado de otro hombre podría ser. Pero también amabas a las mujeres, como sus espaldas se ensanchan al aparecer las caderas, como sus cuellos se mecen como cisnes bebiendo agua cuando llaman tu nombre, su cabello largo acariciando tu cara al despertar en el nido creado en tu pecho, la mañana siguiente. Y aquí estoy, usando la peluca que hice a imagen de las rubias que preferías pero nunca podrás amar. Aquí estoy aplicando delineador sin planes algunos de lagrimar. Yo nunca lo amaré otra vez, anuncio decidido al espejo mientras golpeo con polvos mi cara hacia la sumisión; como si se pudiera salir de los brazos del héroe sin caer de nuevo al peligro. Hoy, por primera vez, bailo para salvarme, convirtiéndome a la vez en la única mujer que nunca tendrás. Hoy, en el bar Esta Noche, en el Lower East Side, soy distancia. Antes, lo más cerca que estuve de hacer drag fue al ser coronado Rey de la Graduación, pero escogí en cambio la tiara de la Reina; zirconia cúbica de alguna manera más real que la corona acartonada del Rey. Hoy, soy Diamante, extravaganzia eleganza, una hembra cantando luz acompañando a Whitney, declarándome la Queen of the Night, dándote that stuff that you want, meneando that thing that you need sashay-shantae-strut-shimmy brillando en el escenario, haciendo moverse a la gente de manera indecente al ritmo marcado por el cetro en mi mano. Un rey, que es una reina tan poderosa que rompe las leyes naturales; lycra color de mi piel y leggings que me ocultan donde no brilla el sol. Un corsé de cordones negros cubre la costilla ausente pero deja salir colgando lo suficiente para deslumbrar y sumergirme en el aplauso del público que ama a este hombre vestido de mujer, hombre vestido de hombre amujerado, hombre vestido de suficientemente hombre para transformarse. Hombre transformado, hombre superado, hombre no más.
Florals

i was sent home today because i had a pink eye but they never sent me home when i had a black eye

in the car daddy said big boys don't cry

but i don't see one in the mirror i wish mommy picked me up mommy looks beautiful in her dress i want to be just like her but my teachers and daddy and stupid sarah tell me i can't i still want to anyways You Construct Intricate Rituals

Diva Doll

the beautiful people

sleep in make-up  wake up late  wait—for no one  run down streets in stilettos half-naked  verge of strip  sip tea in the afternoon  curdle swoon into laughter  spoon  unfamiliars  spill red wine on white sheets and call it art

heart everyone who hearts them back  slack and get over—cover mediocrity with pretty wear it like a mask  suck at it like a titty  ask and they shall receive  we’ve all given in  giddy weak they speak golden we beholden to every shiny syllable spilling raspy from their nasty mouths  eat fruit fed them by lovers leftover from night before  ignore phone calls

fuck:
in hallways—spandex screeching against paint  on stovetops—pilot light scorching ass  so hot in the ass  they hardly notice quote  bliss from Buddha and other enlightened motherfuckers  sucker us with eyelashes  dimples  simple us stupid  stupefy us with one glance—dance dirty against vodka bottles  ashtrays  triggers swagger us  into two month’s rent  glint golden from glitter and angel dust  trust only the glamorous

glamour us and bear teeth  thief our blood under strobelight  moonlight glows a parade in their honor

throw candy to the ugly below  know we want nothing more than a taste of their sweet—On Grace

For Tim Seibles, Ross Gay, Kevin Simmonds, & Pages Matam

You know how when Usain Bolt runs & you want to cry it’s so beautiful? That.

How could we not be a song? I hum this man in my bed all night, my mouth a loose choir

& his body a gospel & I don’t mean like a song I mean gospel like a religion or like a testimony etched in gold. How could we be only a song?

I lay men down for what some call me a faggot for but I call it worship, I see his wood & bark Amen Amen Amen. I call out God’s good name in the midst of the first miracle – the black body.

Look at him, at us. Were the mountains not named after some dark brotha’s shoulders? Didn’t the wind learn its ways from watching two boys run the spine of a field?

Bless the birch-colored body, always threatening to grow or burn. Bless the body that strikes fear in pale police & wets the mouths of church girls & choir boys with want.

Am I allowed to say I praised my pastor most without the robe?

I have found God in the saltiest parts of men: the space between the leg & what biology calls a man, the bottoms of feet, life’s slow milk.

I watch the Heat play the Warriors & I am overcome by a need for tears & teeth. I stopped playing football because being tackled feels too much like making love. I pause in the middle of the street watching the steady pace of the men on corners selling green

& all things dangerous & white. I watch the hands exchange money & escape, the balancing act of hips & denim. This awful dance of poverty, but the dancers? Tatted & callous ballerinas, henna dipped stars.

Do you know what it means to be that beautiful & still hunted & still alive? Who knows this story but the elephants & the trees?
Who says the grace of a black man in motion is not perfect as a tusk in the sun or a single leaf taking its sweet time to the ground?

I expected to be sad in New Orleans

The barrel-chested singer had his lips so close to the microphone that the side street dimmed black as a blue note

If only I could lose sight enough to feel my way through

Just wait

This blast of humid air shakes the pecan tree & there’s so much meat left on the branches

I almost bite down into the air until under the green clapboard house the cats fuck their loud fuck

The full belly of night is slit

Ms. Lynn downs can after can of Coke as she surveys the block from her widow’s walk

She said a rosary before the first mastectomy She pulled every weed from the flower bed before the second

My will has gotten stronger

When a Cadillac turns the corner I know Uncle Paul is haunting me his tongue red as cayenne

At Frenchman & Chartres the tuba holds down a two-measure bass line hooked in the snare
The tourist fixes his cell phone on the littlest black boy firing his trombone from the curb

I’m leaning on The Praline Connection holding a bag of vintage porn that cost $50 I'll commemorate high school graduation in 1990 with this purchase from the bitter homosexual bookseller

Somebody’s selling ice cold water Aporia

What is left out is often what lingers, remains after silence, stillness, separation and grows, groans into speech, movement, absent intention. Doors creaking open without hand or wind, drawers yawning wide, murmurs and whispered laughter, logic eating its own tail, the unseen announcing its omission from what is known, accepted and coming back, rehearsing its lacunate struggle with handles, shadow larynxes, the quotidian and reaching for us each flat, stark day, every burgeoning night simply by being ____.
THIS TIME, THERE WAS NO

Paul Tran

care officer. No inaudible English or witness: the word victim was not used at all. This time, there was no grieving.

No finger pressed into the lip of a VHS, twisting the magnetic tongue, the wild chrysanthemums blooming along my neck. This time, there was no condom. No name.

The only evidence I have is flesh, the war that took it all away, that made this body of water desert. And here, swimming in disappearing dark, where language is neither feral or enough, I open my mouth—a fault line, a tributary, an empty vase—and unbury you: punctured photograph, plucked flower, years of wildfire & earthquake, child that could not remain a child unless cruel & forgetting.

For you, I unbury a mother, a row of teeth, the slit of an eye to describe a home land also split apart. For you,

I reach my hands into this arid weight and excavate the word

No.
Eastchester Bay [ending with an offering]

Now to waterscape; I am escaping.
Now to hooking bunker in the stern, the cooler full with bluefish flop, the forearm sequined in broodspewn scale, and here stands I darting minnows fishing with my child in our porgy spot who tails angling boys, thinks bait & tackle—the sea did good to starve him alive. The tongue did fix to good filet knife—Two-fingered spirit of trawling gut, I will give him back.

I will teach him how a single line beleaguers dark water, whose fiend soul is bigger than us all.

Survivor 2014

Contrary to what's popular I never liked Diana Nyad in my mind overrated white woman ex-olympic swimmer most recently swam from Cuba to Florida privileged thrill seeker daredevil
doing voluntarily what so many people of color are forced to do while attempting to gain freedom drowning in boats, falling overboard, terrible accidents, falling into the jaws of sharks, those waters a meat fest for predators, slavers Sometimes I think about slavery and think if only those waters could tell the tale I've always wanted to say to those people who go on the reality-show Survivor for kicks try being an artist and make it your career choice or how about a single mother or father trying to raise a family on minimum wage living in an impoverished area try being someone who comes to America and doesn't speak the language whose entire survival rests upon learning english
arriving in a strange land, on strange soil, estranged from everything you have ever known like hitting your head against a glass door, or mirrors like optical illusions that used to be in the old fun houses or how about being uninsured and being sick for a number of years weathering that storm or insured but burdened with a costly illness health plans don’t cover or like so many of my students who are bullied to the point they have nowhere to turn and no longer have knowledge of their own name
No I never liked Diana Nyad until one day I caught a clip of her on Ellen I caught the part where she talked about her friendship with Superman Christopher Reeve who in real life suffered paralysis from the neck down.
He looked at her in later years after she'd retired from swimming said he feared she wasn’t living her own dreams, that she was an Olympian And something about her conversations with him motivated her to try again, to listen.
Maybe through her I saw the frayed ends of my own un-lived dreams, my own fear that caused paralysis And so by the end of that conversation with Ellen where Diana talked about returning to her Olympic Self by swimming from Cuba to Florida at age 60 challenging every notion of what it means to be an athlete, a woman, and the stereotypes of aging I was crying by the time she looked into the camera and said Never give up Don’t ever give up on your dreams Myriam Gurba

Constellated

*My friend bought A star and named that Star after her boyfriend.
I gaze at the summer sky, Wondering, “Is that you, Chuy Gómez?”*
Butter Cream

She walks like soft cake butter sweet and light

my appetite whet

the day cold snow

I was seeking her spring whirs hums like the land
black and wet

inside her sanctuary
I stand stare nervous windows sweat to spite the cold blackened trees
bare branches etching
the grey, grey sky

I dream of curling curving into a cadence take her in until we occupy
the same place
the same space

cressing her
I touch myself

I feel delicious

rose chiffon light echoes off my skin

brushing close she says through Cheshire grin
“if I like it, I lick it.”

bouquet of myrrh sandalwood wafts and billows

faux ming vase bursting of cattails and pussy willow tease in the corner

atop
the big, big bed royal purple
gold sheets satin raw silk gregorian chants whisper lusty devotions my mouth goes dry my eyes wide damp palms grasp headboard slats for hands to hold

“breathe” she says as she parts me “breathe”

her breath warms
I am made soft wanting wanting dancing on my skin
I stretch/contract clutch pillow
to the place
she tastes me
I hear the color red feel golden and sun piercing through eyes sliding back fluttering behind closed lids

“open your eyes

see,” she sighs
I ride and ride surrender deep into eyes reflecting rain and fire and all that is song

I ride and ride
her breath
my breath
my breath
I try to catch in earth cracks and breaks lava spews and monsoons and cave- ins and rapture revelations
jesus coming
coming

outside a pewter sky flocked by crows mirror our black bodies rising
Cry Wolf

Born girl in the wither-lands and pop her hinges one by one to floor. No reason to wade towards the sad bucket feeling.

To love this twice-ghost of twill and songbird dead, I need her soldered to me. My grief often catches in the shivery goose trap.

The life expectancy of this kind of animal counted on the rings of a circus top. I say topple her years into a noiseless field.

She learns the word albacore and cartwheels off a nearby cliff. She lives and dives again to come back as ghost moth and shrill.

I hold her to a broken tooth. I hold her though to touch means to cut and barber; to touch means I am pressing juice out of her scarcest bone.

Cradle the shy end of her—that suckle and sour mouth going, Mother, I noose you. Forgive her for all her knife and flesh games. She is so small.

These are the things she loves: touch and the color opal, little lamb of every sugary rhyme, and that look of red faces tearing out her seams.
Necropsy

A fallen chick, bonesoft and free of its incubational shell.
I imagine my body as this bird, opened like a fig, unsexed and ripening on the ground.

Its claws are frozen in grip, each finger bent at the knuckle, puckered toward roughskinned ankles.
I am comforted by its spiny wings, downy underbelly split open; this body turns outward without showing its underpinnings. The bones have reinvented themselves, no longer scaffolding, they fuse to organs, living in tents concealed by swollen tissue.

I lean close to the body, use a stick to search for sets: ovaries, tubes, but find none. I take the bird in my hand, press against its little bush of meat, its foul belly pushed open.

It is familiar. I catalogue its body, take notes on it’s napping guts, the tenderness found in expiry, the body no longer weighted with work or conditioned by movements.

Its form never flew, couldn’t collect its wind-earned luster. It’s just a body escaping its skin, hunting for purpose. This is why. I look towards its figure to guide my own.

A dead bird knows how to avoid self-pity: let injury be swaddled, let death be a marker of possibility. Become something more than a body, a wing, a slender beak.
Bird Hospital

Hurtling down uncaught by updraft he receives the page Saying cast off the woven coat of twigs and all the ice-Sheathed vestments and scrub in

The doctor is the beast he was warned about who will try To make him whole and dizzy from his fall he can’t protest When his song turns monstrous

Nested in the anger he never wanted to be woven into this Bird made of bull and swan thundering on so no wonder The sutures fail in the traffic of wings

Now in the unraveling operation lonesome Haunted by malpractice and terrifying winds Abjuring the night’s belated suit he solo wonton sings Another Middle-Class Black Kid Tries To Name It

I used to dream about a woman trapped inside a burning house. That isn't how she went, my grandmother. Instead, the hood is full of grief that moved inside her like a drunk man's fist.

All I know about my father’s mother are these holes in her, the holes she left. My father, pulled over to the side of the road, crying because a song spills through the radio. I think her grief moved into my father when he was born & into his daughters when we were born & I’m sure someone’s tried to tell you the blues is only music, but the radio the radio.

*

Once, I watched my teacher tell another brown girl her language was too beautiful to belong to her

Once, my teacher bought me a cheeseburger & asked how come the other black kids weren't more like me.

Once, the girl pinned me to the wall until I called myself, or her, a nigga & all week I wore her fingers as a bruise.

That year, I wore cargo shorts through the winter, books in each pocket, haunted hallways full of words that weren’t my own.

*

Is there a word for a child talking to himself or no one? I’ve said ghost but I do have skin & a father, after all. Hands after all, dirt colored & not buried in the dirt.

Sure, I’ve been opened the way girls are opened.
Sure, I’ve been a dark thing gone missing in the dark.
Sure, I’ve looked at my sister & seen a woman caught in flame. But we have pills for that.

We have money for the pills for that.

*

Please—

what’s the word for being born of sorrow that isn’t yours? For having a family?

For belonging nowhere? Not even your body. Especially not there.
Lou Sullivan's Birthday

Sometimes when you’re broke and another someone moves in to help with rent

you wind up awake at four AM, vaguely coked up listening to two boys have sex in the room below you. Something tells you to jerk off – why not so you, on your phone watch a cock appear in and out of some stud’s mouth.

You thrust helplessly into your hand, willing it to be your lover’s tongue and fist, but it’s not going anywhere.

My Father’s Boyfriend

They enter the bed room and close the door, locked away from the world for hours.

Father sulks as his man goes home. He barely talks to us, most nights. Father shouts at Ma. She knows, doesn’t she?

Father loves him more than us- and I can see why.

His boyfriend has big muscles and perky nipples.

Should I tell Ma what I have seen? Should I?
MY FATHER, SWIMMING

Waist deep in ocean, he was not my father.
His wetblack skin gleaming unfamiliar, laughter spilling loudly from open mouth.
The hands that I had come to fear acquiesced, deliquesced in seawater. I watched him anticipate the splash of each wave upon him, as though amazed.

He’d never been a child.
Those were shrouded years, as the sole black altar boy at Dorr Memorial, the one dark child on the diamond of Walter Flynn Field. Watermelon eaten in secret, forbidden by his father. Reticence was demanded.
This austerity is the father I know.
How could it have been him, swimming?

My father was volcanic, his eruptions capricious.
He’d have me retrieve his leather belt, before bending me over his knee.
But in the water, I saw him surrender fierceness, his large palms drawing circles around himself a solitary space for something, someone, soft & safe.
(no subject) –

Children make people smile in a way that suggests

It is possible

The more familiar the surface the less fertile the soil Or this wasn’t meant for growing but rubbing uselessly against like a beast

after a hard day of being less than its troubles

I am sometimes concerned when I am gone my family will scatter my body

just to continue the line by feeding it to the rivers underneath us water is a kind of reproduction because we are carried by it changed when I am maturing your hair or taking your fiancé from you at the beach

I will look so hot stupefying colonizers

Useless is its own empire

As it grows it settles Spell to Find Family

_for Kundiman_

I thirst for the starlight that opens elephant skin. I thirst for the raven conjugated into riven by summer storm. My job is to trick adults into knowing they have hearts. My heart whose irregular plural form is Hermes. My Hermes whose mouths are wings & thieves, begging the moon for a flood of wolves, the reddest honey. My job is to trick myself into believing there are new ways to find impossible honey.

For I do not know all the faces of my family, on this earth. Perhaps it will take a lifetime (or five) to discover every sister, brother. Heartbeat elephantine, serpentine, opposite of saturnine. I drive in the downpour, the road conjugated into uproar, by hearts I do not know. By the guttural & gargantuan highway lion. The 18-wheeler whose shawl of mist is a mane of newborn grandmothers.
I THOUGHT YOU SHOULD KNOW

The apple was supposed to have five seeds inside but when we sliced it open there was a sixth like a finger & I got scared. Scared like I was when I found you talking to yourself in the kitchen at five a.m. the morning after your analyst wrecked the last living part of you. You looked so pitiful sitting there with your hands in your lap & crumbs all over your face but to me in that moment you were a murderer & I wanted us both to die. Speaking of which, I keep my father in a Tupperware in the living room & sometimes when I feel numb I inject his ashes into my arm. I thought you should know.

The thing is that all my girlfriends keep getting raped, which makes it hard to appreciate things like, you know, music, even though I know that all your girlfriends get raped too & music is the only thing that ever makes any of us feel better. I’m sorry I’m not blonde anymore but I used to be & that should count for something. I’m sorry all my wheels fell off. I can still hold a tune & I’m a good kisser when I’m not too anxious. I don’t know how Twitter works but I hear murder is trending, which would scare me too if I weren’t so bent on disappearing forever. It depresses me how much the kids on the boardwalk love Amerika, & how all the really cool murals are based on logos. I feel above these things somehow, even or especially when I know they’re inside me too. I wish our sex felt less like the military & more like flowers, except whenever that happens I always wish the reverse were true. I don’t know how anyone could ever love such a basic bitch, but I hope one day you’ll try.

In a poem KeSha & I coexist differently than in the world. In my dream we were all living in a palace of hair, someone made a bong out of a mango, & everything was free. If I were a mom I’d be a cool mom, & if I were a dad I’d shoot myself. I think war is a problem you & I have not really reckoned with, which isn’t to minimize how harassed we feel by the dailiness of each day, but rather to call attention to differences; degrees of separation. This morning I said a prayer & it helped me. Someone is drunk-dialing you, & from further away than you think. I often wonder what my dead dad would say about the fact that I quit school & fuck girls now. Where did the time go, & why. When did everybody’s hair get so long.

I hate this venue. I hate it when you shake your ass in such a way as to mark the distance between yourself & the people whose ways of ass-shaking you imitate. Self-parody is unattractive, but maybe if you went all the way through & actually became Other we could love each other in the end. I’m not Black but sometimes when I think crackers I don’t mean food. I think mercy could be an air. I think a forest could follow us around. I even think we could become legion. A shining stone; a silver arrow. A YouTube video about bioluminescence or solar flares. Hey. When I said pingback I meant world. Sometimes when politics find their way into love it can be exhausting. My identity tried to fuck your identity but it felt awkward & we both got soft. Speaking of which, when I say I love you I say it mostly to remind myself of a kind of softness we keep trying to cultivate or enter. I wish we both could stop taking it so seriously. My penis is sky-sized. It takes me where I want to go. Away.
Major Arcana: Judgement

During hurricane parties, beer foaming on the curb, we prepare for the inevitable return of glass bottom boats, trawl nets, and oil cans—all we’ve cast into the water.

Jade oak leaves quiver and clouds wing from the bay. It’s not unfamiliar to see bodies rolling in the water after flash floods. Clothed in tuxes and paisley dresses, it’s as if they’d brazenly decided to swim. If you stared long enough they would stand tall and flat like the horizon’s oil rigs. Instead they rest in slick loam

beside bricks and shattered cedar, dreaming of moss
    on cypress knees.
She Calls Once That Is A Lie

When she calls in the morning I’ve changed my number address identifying features I’ve sacrificed my name when she calls in the morning With news she’s selling my teeth on eBay
The teeth she broke off One by one While I was sleeping that is a lie when she Calls in the morning I was awake Each time she whittled away my ability to bite Once on VH1 in a thrash metal rockumentary that is a lie
It was at the Kentucky Derby when she calls in the morning She’s taken all my hats and next my hair And my scalp is an angry red gash Once eating toffee by the sea that is a lie When she calls in the morning it was a reststop In Jersey and the assortment was unreal And of all things I chose Dentine Once I knew all the lemon drops by names And identifying features they had names When she calls in the morning she wants the children When she calls in the morning and then the house And the hospital where they won’t operate on me There are no spare parts not even a space between Whistling
Like a fist of the bank in wet Season lying through her teeth {insert terror}
born after midnight & before morning before we name it witching hour born on the night stars turned inside out leaving light spattered sky raven born above ocean born tumbling between heavens & earths born when jupiter first shaded half the moon born of wine & meat & war born between slaughter & laughter between torment & tease Argus came feet first eyes on his soles eyes closed on his toenails eye stamped in the small of his back eye lodged at the base of his neck his mouth a red silent yowl of eyes if my slumlord allowed pets i’d adopt every after hour paw mauled in battle

trimmed with scabs toppling trash for fries & wing tips

fur splattered with egg foo young

these streets weren’t paved for tenderness

a tabby’s pregnant belly low-hanging
as a rain cloud

a swollen nimbus grazing the ground
MANY THANKS TO ALL OF OUR CONTRIBUTORS, INCLUDING:

EVENT READERS & ORGANIZERS

FINANCIAL SPONSORS

PARTICIPANTS IN NEPANTLA’S 1ST WORKING DINNER

r. erica doyle, Eduardo C. Corral, Pamela Sneed, Timothy Liu, Cheryl Boyce-Taylor, JP Howard, Charif Shanahan, Rosebud Ben-Oni, Darrel Alejandro Holnes, Rickey Laurentiis, Alok Vaid-Menon, Janani Bala, Eden, Jerome Murphy, Rigoberto González, and Tommy Pico.

... This journal would not have been possible without all of you!